See full summary » Storyline If life is a game, then you are a pawn. Turn-based. Not a lot of fun. The game is over the moment you die. There is no time-pause, no saving. Go through a tunnel, die, and you're screwed.The situation is not your fault. Not your fault at all. The world won't listen to you. You are insignificant, a nothing. Because there is no society, no rules, and no justice in the world. A free-market jungle ruled by the strongest. The true purpose of life is to thrive, to survive, to consume, and to be happy. And this is a terrifying place. This is what the future looks like. Your only way out of this hellhole is the Red Rocket. And you better hope it's not too late.Written by Anonymous Frequently Asked Questions User Reviews The game that everyone has been waiting for - the Sequel to the game that everyone loved - has finally arrived and I can tell you it's an incredible game. The sheer number of features and the realism of the whole game is amazing, I don't know how these guys did it. The game has a lot of people on board that helped design it, not just one person, which is very rare in video games these days. It's a huge success story and something we can all be very proud of. I have had a lot of thoughts while playing the game, I hope I can talk about them, I have a big story to tell and I just can't wait to share it. But there is a big problem I have with this game, and I think that I've been very brave to say so because a lot of people love this game and they seem to hate what I'm going to say. First of all, there is a lot of fan service in this game, and I understand that we are living in the post-plagiarism era where the sense of pride that comes from being a huge fan of a game is now considered rude and a bit pretentious. I don't mean that this is a bad thing, I mean that this is a good thing. Games are free, and these days you can make a great game without having to pay any money at all to anyone except for the artists who do the graphics and sound and the musicians who write the music and make all the sound effects. Every year, in the games industry 82157476af
