Device Details: .Q: MooTools Promise Cancel and Resolve First off, sorry for asking a question that has an obvious answer. I'm fairly new to JavaScript so I'm not very familiar with programming terminology that would help me find what I need, and I am definitely an amateur at MooTools. I'm using MooTools to create a PDF generator. The PDF is made through a web service, but I'm using the version of the same service to generate the PDF locally on the server. I have three pieces of information that I need to transfer to the PDF: Title, Date, Comments. The PDF generator creates a PDF through the web service, but it has to first store the information in the database before creating the PDF. Because of this, I'm using Promises. The code is fairly simple and straight forward. I've added in a couple little things that I've changed since they were working, and now when I try to generate the PDF I get a jquery.min.js file not found error.

var objPDF = new Promise(function(resolve, reject){ //Create the PDF with the values from the database resolve(data); });
objPDF.then(function(data){ //Process the values of data and create the PDF document.body.innerHTML = data;
document.getElementById('idPdfGenerated').style.display = "none";
document.getElementById('idCreatePdf').style.display = "none"; });
objPDF.cancel(); objPDF.reject();

I'm guessing that what I'm doing is not possible with Promises, and I just need to use my old technique. I don't know if that's the case or not, but the cancelling of the promise doesn't seem to be working. I'm not sure why I can't cancel a promise if it's going to be later used to resolve something else. I'm trying to get the output to match my requirement to create the pdf and then clear it away when I'm done. Many Thanks

A: You don't need to use the Promise constructor. You can use the resolve and reject methods directly, just 50b96ab0b6
